

Dear Ms Yueng,

I am writing to propose some other ways which are more meaningful and fun for students to raise funds for the less fortunate of the society.

The fun fair will be held on Saturday afternoon at 1:00 p.m. in the school playground. There will be game stalls where participants can win prizes. We would also like to have a second-hand stall where we sell second-hand clothes and books. The last stall will be for food, since the participants might get hungry while playing games. Both parents and students could attend and the tickets will be about ten dollars each. The reason we like this idea is because it will be fun for both the participants and the helpers. Also, it can help develop student leadership and confidence.

Another idea is a fashion show. The clothing and costumes will be made by the students. The models will also be students. They will model the outfits on a cat walk in the school hall. Parents and students can come to watch the students. The ticket price will be ten dollars and free for children below 10. We wanted to have a fashion show because students need a lot of time to think and create costumes so this will help improve their artistic and creative skills. Also, the models will gain a lot of confidence by walking on the catwalk.

Overall I believe these two ideas will raise more funds than a Dress Casual Day and it will be more fun and helpful to the students too. I hope you like these ideas and will consider using them.

Yours sincerely,

Lawati Nogen
