Once upon a time there was a human called Dave. He was just living a normal life on Earth. Everyday he would wake up, eat his breakfast, shower and go to his job. He was a game developer and he sold almost one million copies of his game 'Crasher'.

After a long time of work he and his friends were walking but when walking home Dave and his friends saw something floating up on the sky. After they got a closer look they were shocked, One of Dave's friend took his phone and took a photo of it but little does he know that he had flash-on. Everyone froze when the spaceships went closer to them. They tried to make a run for it but it was faster than expected. It caught up to them within seconds. After that Dave and his friends looked up and saw a beam of light on them. After that they started to float up into the ship. Soon after they were greeted by unknown creatures but they called it aliens.

After about an hour later but within than one hour the aliens scanned Dave and his friends. After that the aliens finally know the language of humans and told them they were just exploring the outer space and going into each planet to see what they can find. After Dave and his friends befriended the aliens. After some time of talking the aliens were gone and Dave and his friends knew exactly what their game would be.
